Of wars in endless number I dreamed until, while far from ill, I simply could not slumber.

Of wars, I say, I dreamed, Of contests gladiatorial When through the gray shone out the day-The day they call Memorial. And still I lay and schemed, Evolving plans piratic

The Interborough is not of the opinion that too much holidaving is good for passengers. Passengers have to stand on workdays, so, when traffic is lighter, why not cut down the service so that the usual percentage may stand?

Now that the Public, as it were, Service, in a manner of speaking, Commission has determined that each subway passenger shall have 17.78 inches of sitting-room, the married men's association is going to petition for a law entitling each husband to two hooks in at least one clothes-closet.

THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPYS

May 29-With Mistress Alma to Scarsdale and to R. Kirby's for luncheon, the board, as R. said, groaning beneath the weight of costly viands; nor was it a bad meal, neither. To Hartsdale in the afternoon, where A. Behr did beat me at tennis, albeit I played better than my wont. So home, and I took Alma home to dinner with me; and Mary Black was distrait sithen I am come late, as ever when I play tennis afternoons. In the evening L. Untermeyer the poet and Jeannette his wife came, and we had some talk and lemon-squash, 30-A. McCurdy the minister come to call, and I heartily glad of seeing him; and he told me of many things and folk, and his views all sound, save one or two in matters of literature. To an inn with my wife, for a lark, and we had dinner, and then I to the office till late, reading Germany's reply to my Lord Woodrow's note; and it worried me and gave me disappointment.

31-Up betimes, and read all day in the publick prints and in some old numbers of Collier's Weekly, wherein did appear some fine pieces by N. Hapgood. To the office and on the way did meet Mistress Jack Campbell, who belaboured me for some of my writings, saying I had no heart: whereas others say I am oversentimental and soft-hearted. Whereas the truth of it I do not know, giving the matter no thought soever.

PROFESSOR OF ASTRONOMY AND THE COMIC SPIRIT AT COLUMBIA

Professor, you've convinced me a semester of astronomy May be more live, more vital than political economy; And I have even found it sweet to hear your jargon cryptic Of radial velocities and poles of the ecliptic.

The dismal mathematics of the distances sidereal You managed to exalt into a joyousness ethereal; And still in recollection my enthusiasm waxes, Even as when you first expounded stellar parallaxes.

You taught the laughing wisdom of the universe whose numerous Old stars and comets whiz with a punctiliousness humorous; You taught us how to weigh the suns, and lightly told the reasons Why Mother Earth is blessed with such variety of seasons.

Alas, celestial study makes one feel like scarcely anything. Compared with stars we're each, at most, a twenty-for-a-penny thing; Infinity is often pleasant to reflect on, yet it Has made me feel so cheap I'm in a hurry to forget it.

But, best of all, you showed us in a manner undidactical, The value of the science which the scoffers call unpractical; I'd take astronomy for years if you assure me, sir it Can make me, as it made you, Master of the Comic Spirit.

Combination of Silent and Spoken Drama at the Astor Finely Acted. The unique touch is what all directors of the movies are desirous of, and George Beban is the latest to give a new twist to this department of the theatre. The combining of the silent with the spoken drama has been attempted once or twice before, though tempted once or twice before, though in New York never in exactly the manner in which Mr. Beban introduced manner in which Mr. Beban introduced it last night at the Astor Theatre. Mr. $1,2,000 LEFT OVER Beban offering was "The Alien"; of which the first part is in motion films, and the second, the continuation and conclusion of the story, is a one-act play. "The Alien" is adapted from "The Sign of the Rose," a one-act sketch Vanderbilt Praised for which was widely popular in vaudeville. In the adaptation the play is expanded, but the spoken portion, with the scene in the flower shop, is very much the the sample spoken portion, with the scene in the flower shop, is very much the same as in the original.

The story is simple and, if improbable, possesses ample scope for sobs and laughs, which, after all. is what is wanted in the motion picture world. It is the tale of a poor Italian, whose daughter is killed by the automobile of a man who is scarching for his own daughter, who has been kidnapped by his brother. The poor Italian is suspected of the crime, and in a flower shop, where he comes to buy a rose for ship dwapter's funeral, he is arrested and brutally treated by a detective, who is about to shoot him, when things are set straight by the arrival of the lost girl's father, Mr. Griswold, who announces he has found his child. Griswold then discovers that it is he who has killed the alien's daughter, and he attempts to make reparation in money. This the poor Italian refuses, and the curtain falls with his pies that the rich may show more pity for the poor.

As far as the film part went, "The Alien" is an effective enough nine-real feature, and the change to the acted drama showed the requisite sense of contrast. It is of Mr. Beban, however, that serious comment alone can be made. His acting of the Italian was really a superb bit of character portrayal, informed with a pathos and a passion that were the rarer for the absence of any exaggration. It was, in short, one of the most moving and sincerest impersonations that the stage has seen this season. Mr. Beban deserves a play that shall be worthy of his powers; even though his present venture is likely, judging from the sobs that shook the house last night, to prove of abundant financial proft.

ERIE DIRECTORS PAY TRIBUTE TO GOVERNOR JOHN G. M'CULLOUGH.
The Directors of the Eric Railroad Company, inspecting its system, and now entering upon the line of the Chicago and Eric Railroad, the object of his special interest, have just received, with deep regret, announcement of the death in New York yeaterday, May 29th, of their late associate, John G. McCullough.
For more than thirty years Governor FROM FLEET FUND ate, John G. McCullough.

For more than thirty years Governor McCullough had participated in the management of the Erie properties, and by his wise and unfailing counsel and co-operation had contributed powerfully to their conservation and upbuilding. The influence of his broad and generous sympathies net only had impressed his immediate associates in the Board, but also to an extent quite unusual had reached out generally through the entire Erie organization, which will share in the sense of loss of a kindly friend and a sagacious adviser.

sense of loss of a kindly friend and a sagacious adviser.

Honored in the four States in which he had found a home and prominent place, he had attained highest distinction in Vermont, the State of his final abode, which, with characteristic and affectionate loyalty, he served as citizen and as Governor. His full and well rounded life, now ended in peace and honor, deserves and receives the just encomiums of the public and his associates in his many spheres of activity.

Appropriate recognition will be made upon the lines of the Erle System, and a copy of these minutes will be published and communicated to the family of Governor McCullough, in assurance of sincere esteem and of respectful sympathy.

Signed by the order of the Executive Committee:
